OCTOBER 2018 MEN'S ISSUE

The Globe and Mail Style Advisor's autumn men's edition helps readers prepare for cooler months ahead with cozy wardrobe inspiration, clever design ideas, and tips for unique getaways and delicious entertaining.

What's new and noteworthy for men this fall including a behind the scenes look at the standout collection in Moncler's Genius lineup, travel tips for Athens in the off-season, the independent B.C brewery making a name for itself internationally and the return of the rugby shirt in men's wear.

Essentials

The more plaid, the better is the message in our guide to the most handsome autumn checks.

Fashion/Grooming

Sweaters go oversized while luxe combs elevate his 'do. Plus, a profile of the Montreal designer making a splash in London's street wear scene, and a behind-the-scenes look at one of Canada's oldest suit making outfits.

Design/Travel

Forget statement wallpaper, the latest trend in home décor is a wall of colourful moss. Also, a new Mercedes initiative highlights the connection between contemporary design and autos, and home stereo systems get a boost from novelty speakers.

Food & Drink

A superstar Canadian chef releases his first cookbook. Also a lineup of idiosyncratic ingredients that are shaking up craft cocktail menus.

FEATURES

Fashion: Just in time for coat season, profiles of major players and emerging brands highlight why Canada is the world's go-to-source for stylish outerwear.

Design: The late Dutch designer Maurits Cornelis Escher is known for his graphic patterns, which are a big source of inspiration for contemporary housewares and spaces this season.

Food & Drink: In Mexico City, contributor Charlie Friedman explores the connection between the city's street taco stands and its fine dining scene.
