APRIL 2019 THE BUSINESS OF STYLE

A special business of style focus throughout the issue explores advocacy among luxury brands and consumers, and the way social responsibility, a sustainable approach and diverse points of view are creating dynamic approaches to the way we experience fashion, design, travel, food and drink.

What's new and noteworthy for Spring 2019 including the launch of a luxury flagship in Montreal, the latest offering from a fine watch collection, exploring an emerging foodie destination on the west coast and a profile of the breakout Canadian fashion star in New York.

Essentials

As part of the lead up to The Globe and Mail Style Advisor's partnership with the Canadian Arts and Fashion Awards (CAFA) on its annual fashion and retail forum, we introduce our audience to Canada's leading activists in fashion and beauty.

Fashion/Grooming

Cargo trousers get an elevated update for spring, hair gel makes a comeback as a key component of the season's slick beauty look and a profile of the man who creates otherworldly catwalk environments for boundary pushing labels.

Design/Travel

From the return of glass block in interiors to a primer for decorating with swish sconces, we guide you through the design updates of the moment. Plus, the latest reason to visit a revitalized Detroit, and a Saville Row legend's foray into in-flight fashion.

Food & Drink

The gourmet food hall concept arrives in Canada, and the premixed cocktail goes posh via some of the country's top indie distillers.

FEATURES

Fashion: The renewed popularity of the season's it piece of apparel for both women and men, the blazer, is a reminder of how the garment has been constantly updated to reflect the spectrum of conservative to disruptive moments in fashion history.

Design: How do you live beautifully with art? Design contributor Kristina Ljubanovic profiles ambitious collectors who make painting, sculpture and other work an important element in their covetable living spaces.

Food & Drink: Spanish born chef Najat Kaanache, an alumnus of iconic restaurants including The French Laundry, Per Se, Noma and elBulli, now calls Fez, Morocco, home and shares her guide to the city's most delicious culinary offerings.
