As our body’s largest organ, the health of our skin is closely linked to our overall well-being. It also protects us against outside influences, making it all the more important to keep our skin healthy and hydrated throughout the colder season. This special feature highlights some of the challenges affecting our skin and measures for keeping it healthy.

Proposed topic highlights:

SEASONAL FACTORS – From cold temperatures to overheated rooms, what to watch out for?

SKIN CARE – Experts weigh in on best practices for the different skin types.

CHALLENGES – Measures for caring for and preventing flares for skin conditions like eczema.

RESEARCH – Up-to-date information about the factors affecting our skin.

INNOVATION – Advancing diagnostic tools, treatments and gadgets for skin health.
