Amid a global pandemic, health-care providers are learning how to care for their patients differently by adjusting the way they communicate, use resources, perform procedures and leverage available technology.

This special feature will explore how digital health solutions have ensured better outcomes for Canadians overall and especially in the context of COVID-19.

Proposed topic highlights:

TELEMEDICINE – Access to consultations where and when they're needed.

DATA MANAGEMENT – What we can learn from combining health and community data.

HEALTH INNOVATION – Bringing bold ideas to life.

EDUCATION – The next generation of health-care leaders.
