The number of car purchases across Canada is increasing, with first-time car buyers in particular boosting car sales in the wake of the pandemic. For urbanites looking to avoid public and other shared modes of transportation due to safety concerns, automobiles have once again become the preferred mode of transportation.

But without a doubt, the myriad of models, options and personal needs can make the car-buying process confusing.

This special report will aid potential new-car buyers with their purchasing decisions. With articles including insider insight from Drive columnists, this 2021 New Car Guide will walk readers through how to purchase a new car and share a variety of perspectives to influence the car buying process.
