Polls show that the country's economy is the biggest issue for Canadians, the majority of which believe oil and gas need to be a part of the strategy for recovery. Yet at the same time, the global economy is decarbonizing and deploying variations of green recovery measures in a number of countries, including Canada. So what does a low-carbon future look like for Canada? How will it affect the country's energy sector and overall economic competitiveness? Published to coincide with the sixth annual National Energy Roundtable conference, this special feature will highlight two key themes dominating Canadian energy: competitiveness and sustainability

Proposed topic highlights:

COMPETITIVENESS – What will the energy company of the future look like? Consolidation trends in oil and gas. Bringing capital into the energy sector.

SUSTAINABILITY – How does Canada hit net-zero emissions by 2050? Energy system optimization. Best practices for environmental, social and governance (ESG).
