The organic food system is built on four main principles – health, ecology, fairness and care – that resonate with a wide base of producers and consumers alike. Published to coincide with Organic Week, held September 12 to 18, 2022, in co-operation with the Canada Organic Trade Association (COTA), this special feature will highlight the impact, challenges and opportunities of Canada's organic sector.

Proposed topics:

CULTIVATING CARE – Why are responsible, care-first organic farming practices important in today's society?

HOLISTIC HEALTH – How do organic farming practices benefit people, animals and the planet?

NATURAL CHOICE – Why are organic farming synonymous with natural ecological cycles?

ORGANIC FOR ALL – Why is a dedication to equity, respect and stewardship in farming practices increasingly essential for people and the planet?
